CAP. THATCHER
BOOSTING NEVADA
TO DENVERITES

That Nevada, in the near future, will experience a revival of the mining excitement likened to the great rush into Tonopah and Goldfield, during the pioneer days of these camps, is the firm belief of Captain George W. Thatcher, formerly of Aspen, but now a resident of the Sage Brush state, in which he is recognized as a power, financially and politically.

Captain Thatcher, who is the brother of Joseph Thatcher, president of the Denver National bank, came to Denver to attend the funeral of his sister, Mrs. Hugh Butler. He is interested in the famous Pioneer mine in the Rhyolite district of southern Nevada, recently acquired by George Wingfield and D. R. C. Brown, the latter of Colorado. This mine is one of the great bonanzas of Nevada.

"A virgin territory, whose mining possibilities cannot be exaggerated," said Captain Thatcher, "will be thrown open to an army of prospectors within the next two years. It lies in that vast stretch of desert between Ely, in the northeastern portion of the state, and Rhyolite, in the southwest. None but the most daring prospectors have penetrated into this vast waste because water supply has never been fully ascertained, and to venture into the desert a hundred miles distant from known sources of water and feed requires an outlay that takes into consideration every possible emergency that may arise. However, a line of railway from Ely to Tonopah has been thoroughly surveyed and partially graded and construction work will begin from both Tonopah and Ely not later than the first of September.

"Borax" Smith the California millionaire, who is heavily interested in the Tonopah and Tidewater railway, is one of the men behind the project. Chris Zabriskie has just returned from Europe, having successfully floated $5,000,000 of bonds. Home subscribers have completed the financing of the railroad.

"Expert geologists and practical mining men who explored the territory to be tapped by the railroad, report that its mineral resources in gold, silver and copper are of vast abundance and continuous in deposit.

"The line will run almost due southwest from Ely, connecting with the Tonopah and Tidewater at Cuprite, south of Goldfield. It will have the effect of making Ely not only a smelting center for copper ores, but for gold and silver and lead, as Ely is closer to the coal supply base in Wyoming than any other town of the state. Coal from Wyoming is brought to Ogden and thence to Cobre and down to Ely, or by way of Salt Lake over the Rio Grande and Western Pacific. The completion of this project will bring the resources of civilization to the aid of the prospector in an unexplored district."

Captain Thatcher states that Nevada is better off now in a mining way than at any time in her history, owing to the elimination of the wildcat. Mining, as practiced now, is legitimate; instead of being a carnival of stock selling promoters, Nevada simply asks for merely enough to develop her mines.—Denver Republican.
